The Bumble Bio Guide for 2026

A Bumble bio has 300 characters to show who you are and give a match something to reply to. This guide covers a short bio formula, the six bio styles, how to write for casual, long-term or friends, openers that get replies, the clichés to cut and a checklist before you publish.

A 300-character bio formula

One line about you, one specific detail, one easy question. Most good bios land between 100 and 280 characters. Example (148 characters): "Weekend hiker, weekday ramen perfectionist. I will judge your broth, never your playlist. What is the best view you have ever earned the hard way?"

The six bio styles

Style	Best for	Try this setting
Witty and humorous	People who love to make others laugh	Funny, Playful
Confident and bold	People who know what they want	Ambitious, Balanced
Chill and laid-back	Easy-going people who like simple pleasures	Laid-back, Playful
Thoughtful and deep	Meaningful connections and long-term dating	Intellectual, Serious
Adventure-focused	Travel, outdoors and new experiences	Adventurous, Balanced
Creative and artistic	Artists, makers and music lovers	Creative, Balanced

Write for what you want

- Casual. Keep it light and fun. Talk about plans you would enjoy, like trying a new food spot.
- Long-term. Show one value that matters to you and the kind of life you enjoy, warmly and without a list of demands.
- Friends. Mention the hobbies you want company for, like a running buddy or a board game night.
- Not sure yet. Stay friendly and open, and let your interests do the talking.

Endings that get replies

- A question with an easy answer: "What is your go-to comfort food?"
- A small challenge: "Convince me your favourite pizza topping is the right one."
- A detail worth asking about: "Ask me about the time I followed a trail sign the wrong way."
- A choice: "Coffee walk or museum afternoon?"

Clichés to cut

- "I love to laugh" and "I love to travel": say where and what made you laugh.
- "Partner in crime": say what you want to do together.
- "No drama" and "do not waste my time": write about what you enjoy instead.
- A list of adjectives: show one with a real example.

Checklist before you publish

- It is 300 characters or fewer.
- It sounds like you when you read it out loud.
- It has one specific detail and one easy question.
- It is positive and respectful.
- Every fact in it is true.
